

Hurricanes Katrina and Rita and the war against radical Islam may or may not spell the beginning of the United States' decline to the status of a normal great power. If those events do, it may take 30 or 50 years to play to the end. Whatever happens, the American people must demand smarter and more prudent action of national affairs from political leaders. Americans must unite and work together. The future stakes are too high.

Club Purpose Well Received

The word "cepia" in the title The Cepia Club stands for "community ending public ignorance and apathy." The Cepia Club—a.k.a. The Club—is designed to help individuals working peacefully and legally within their communities while using positive action to solve problems. So far during our initial operations this summer, people have responded with ideas, help, and encouragement. Many individuals are "buying ownership" in the Club ideals.

The Club has been established as a private enterprise to be a self-sustaining member of society. It couldn't work any other way. The Club is based on the principle of "service"—to others, communities (loosely and broadly defined), and the United States of America. Our "service" to the greater whole involves assisting associated, autonomous and self-governing parts of the whole Club network to achieve their political activism, economic sufficiency, cultural enrichment, and social awareness goals.

The term "community" used within the Club is not based solely on geography or demographics. We include in the concept of “community” two or more individuals in any political (including geographic and demographic), economic, cultural and social grouping engaged in a peaceful and legal activity. The Cepia Club does not have “members.” We do certify communities who want to associate with our Values, Vision, and Mission. It is in that context that people are “members” of those independent communities. Our certification is merely our “seal” of acclaim that those associating with The Cepia Club follow the Family Standard, the Articles for Individual Action and the Rules of Organization in their activities. The association with The Cepia Club is merely an alliance of interest.

It is only by uniting responsible people and working together for common goals for the general good that the country can be made safe, prosperous, and free for all the future generations. The time is now. Take action today!

Eclipse?

The hurricanes this late summer and early fall could have an impact on the United States far into the future. They will result in the appearance of long ignored political realities. Literally hundreds of billions of dollars—which America doesn’t have—will be required for the recovery of the affected areas. The political, economic, cultural, and social consequences of the events and their aftermath could be the catalyst for the eclipse of American world supremacy.

The deficit spending required, and the reaction of the world financial markets (derivatives, bonds, currencies, and stocks) might compound with energy resource instability and military and diplomatic entanglements overseas to produce so much stress on the Federal government and America’s wealth, identity, and status that the fragile illusions under which U.S. citizens exist will shatter.

The persistent illusions Americans suffer include: unlimited and cheap natural resources, inexhaustible wealth, unchallengeable and eternal military dominance, perpetual friends among nations, indispensable leadership of world affairs, the absence of strategic threats and competitors, an ownership society, the achievable American dream under capital socialism, protection of the Bill of Rights, and government under the Constitution. These are just a few of the most important misconceptions. The list could extend further.

These illusions are the bubble of an individually comfortable reality. Americans as a whole are reluctant to look outside that bubble for whatever reason. People might suspect danger but they won’t talk of it. Neither have they forced a different approach to solve problems before the mentioned problems become challenging and unmanageable.
